The Beat Goes On

As the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic continue to influence our lives every day in both big and little ways, we as a community preserve and look for ways to thrive in both big and little ways.

We support our neighbors who own businesses especially when they are able to expand, like the Printer's Cabinet and Curiosities that is moving from its wedge-shaped shop in Oil City to a larger spot on 12th Street in Franklin.

We hold small gatherings to celebrate as we can, like O.C.toberfest in Oil City, that offered a sampling of what the county's larger festivals could not this fall due to crowd-size concerns.

We applaud the little moments of joy, like when Franklin's young football program scores three times against a much stronger opponent who ends up easily taking the win on the night.

And we seek out ways to keep important social programs afloat when fundraising is limited, like the United Way of Venango County's Twelve Days of Giveaways.

This week's Eight & 322 Sunday Edition looks at how the beat goes on in Venango County in all these ways and more.

Trump Campaign Makes Stop in OC

Lara Trump swung through Oil City late Thursday afternoon to stump for her father-in-law, President Donald Trump. The Women for Trump tour made stops throughout Pennsylvania on what a spokesperson called a busy day. Check out Eight & 322 for more photos of the event.
